

SEWER PROBLEM IS NEARING SOLUTION

proposition by the sum of $777. The computed actual cost of the plant, minus the alternate propositions is $29,124.

Must Guarantee Plant.
The meeting Tuesday morning was attended by Mayor Kelly, aldermen McGhee, Blumenthal, Hewitt and Clayton, Sorenson & Morgan, W. E. Anderson and F. B. Smith and M. L. Diver, of the Public Works Engineering company. City attorney Caldwell was also present, and after the opening of the bids, stated that constructing engineers, in the event the plans are changed for the plant, must make a contract for specific performance with the city.

Mr. Diver, who will represent the Public Works company during the building of the plant, will be completed by April 15 next, has been in El Paso the greater part of the summer. He came from Detroit, Mich.

Lively Meeting Monday.
At the special meeting Monday afternoon, attended by Mayor Kelly, members of the city council and Mr. Smith, W. E. Anderson and George Watson, representing F. V. Lister & Co., of Mexico City, who were interested in submitting bids for the sewer construction work, affairs were enlivened by a tilt between Mr. Smith and Mr. Watson.

Mr. Watson charged that the plant, according to the plans, could not be built for $91,000, and also charged that Mr. Smith had stated that he might leave out some of the equipment prescribed in the plans in the event Mr. Smith secured the contract.

Mr. Smith did not hesitate in obtaining the floor and stated: "That gentlemen, I have never said anything of the kind."

Mr. Watson then asked if Mr. Smith had not told him he might leave out part of the prescribed equipment. Mr. Smith answered that he was not on the witness stand and did not propose to be catechized. He also charged Mr. Watson with the statement that "No gentleman accustomed to dealing with Americans, would come into this room and make a statement like this man has made."

Purpose of Meeting.
The meeting was called in order to allow Mr. Smith, who drew the plans, to explain certain provisions of the specifications. Mr. Anderson was the first to speak and stated the plans were not quite clear, owing to the specifications reciting that the contractors must guarantee to produce certain results as provided in the plans. Mr. Anderson stated it would be impossible for any contractor to figure that close to another engineer's plans. Mr. Anderson later stated, however, that since a conference had been held with Mr. Smith, that he would be able to make an intelligible bid according to the plans.

Mr. Watson followed and stated that it was a physical impossibility to build the plant for $91,000 and led on with his remarks until the tilt with Mr. Smith followed. Mr. Watson later announced he would withdraw from the meeting as his company was unable to meet the competition.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

Boyd Emerson and "Fingerless" Fraser enter Kalvik, Alaska, and meet a young white woman, Cherry Malotte, who shelters them.

Cherry describes the salmon fisheries and the unscrupulous head of the Kalvik cannery.

Cherry owns a cannery site. Emerson, George Balt and she go into partnership. Emerson describes his failure to "make good" in Alaska.

Emerson kisses Cherry goodbye. Balt, Fraser and Emerson nearly lose their lives in Katmai pass and miss the steamer at Katmai on their way out to get capital.

After dreadful privations they catch the boat at Kodiak and are soon en route for Chicago. Emerson seeks Miss Mildred Wayland.

She and Emerson are engaged. Her father, Wayne Wayland, is a millionaire. Alton Clyde offers $10,000 toward the cannery.

Balt and Emerson meet Marsh in Chicago. Marsh is a suitor for Mildred's hand. Marsh tells Mildred about Cherry Malotte. He and Wayne Wayland plan a cannery trust.

Mildred learns that Emerson and Cherry are partners. Banker Hilliard, Seattle, refuses to lend Emerson $100,000. Cherry, who has arrived in Seattle, accepts a dinner invitation from Hilliard.

Cherry discovers that Emerson is to marry Mildred. Marsh causes annoying delays for Emerson's party. To come refuses Emerson a loan. Clyde suggests that Cherry can get the loan from Hilliard.

Emerson enrages Cherry by criticising her friendly relations with Hilliard. Cherry sees Hilliard, who unexpectedly furnishes the money. Marsh causes a strike, delaying the loading of Emerson's machinery.

Balt's fishermen fight the strikers. Fraser shoots a striker and impersonates Emerson, for whom a warrant is issued.

Emerson escapes to Kalvik, Marsh follows. Fraser is released and rejoins Emerson. Emerson's machinery is tampered with.

Marsh builds a trap to prevent salmon from reaching Emerson's cannery site. He is mysteriously stabbed. Emerson is accused.

Salmon begin their run, but Marsh hires Emerson's fishermen. Clyde threatens to sell his stock. Fraser is noncommittal to Emerson concerning Cherry's early life.

CHAPTER XVII.

As the sun slanted up between the southward hills out from the gossamer haze that lay like filmy forest smoke above the ocean came a snow white yacht.

To Boyd Emerson she seemed like an angel of mercy, and he stood forth upon the deck of his launch searching her hungrily for the sight of a woman's figure. When he had first seen the ship rounding the point he had uttered a cry, then fallen silent watching her as she drew near, heedless of his surroundings. His heart was leaping; his breath was choking him. It seemed as if he must shout Mildred's name aloud and stretch his arms out to her. Of course she would see him as the Grande Dame passed. She would be looking for him, he knew. She would be standing there, wet with the dew, searching with all her eyes. Doubtless she had waited patiently at her post from the instant land came into sight. Seized by a sudden panic lest she pass him unnoticed, he ordered his launch near the yacht's course. His eyes roved over the craft, but all he saw were a uniformed officer upon the bridge and the bronzed faces of the watch staring over the rail. He saw close drawn curtains over the cabin windows, indicating that the passengers were still asleep. Then as he stood there heavily hearted, drooping with fatigue, his wet body chilled by the morning's breath, the Grande Dame glided past, and he found the shell beneath his feet rocking in her wake.

George Balt hailed him and brought his own launch alongside.

"What craft is that?" he inquired.

"She is the company's yacht with the N. A. P. officers aboard."

"Some of our boys is hurt pretty bad," he observed. "I've told them to take in their nets and go back to the plant."

"We all need breakfast."

"I don't want nothing. I'm going over to the trap."

Emerson shrugged his shoulders listlessly; he was very tired. "What is the use? It won't pay us to lift it."

"I've watched that point of land for five years, and I never seen fish act this way before." Balt growled stubbornly. "If they don't strike in today we better close down. Marsh's men cut half our nets and crippled more than half our crew last night." He began to rumble curses. "Say, we made a mistake the other day, didn't we? We ought to have put that tatter away. It ain't too late yet."

"Wait. Wayne Wayland is aboard that yacht. I know him. He's a hard man, and I've heard strange stories about him, but I don't believe he knows all that Marsh has been doing. I'm going to see him and tell him everything."

"Spose he turns you down?"

"Then there will be time enough to consider what you suggest. I don't like to think about it."

"You don't have to," said Balt, lowering his voice so that the helmsmen could not hear. "I've been thinking it over all night, and it looks like I'd ought to do it myself. Marsh is coming to me anyhow, and I'm older than you be. It ain't right for a young fellow like you to take a chance. If they get me you can run the business alone."

Boyd laid his hand on his companion's shoulder.

"No," he said. "Perhaps I wouldn't stick at murder—I don't know. But I won't profit by another man's crime, and if it comes to that I'll take my share of the risk and the guilt. Whatever you do, I stand with you. But we'll hope for better things. It's no easy thing for me to go to Mr. Wayland asking a favor. You see, his daughter is—Well, I—I want to see her very badly."

Balt eyed him shrewdly.

"I see! And that makes it dead wrong for you to take a hand. If it's necessary to get Marsh I'll do it alone. With him out of the way I think you can make a go of it. He's like a rat—somebody's got to stomp on him."

At the plant he found Alton Clyde tremendously excited at the arrival of the yacht and eager to visit his friends. He sent him to the launch and after a hasty breakfast joined him.

On their way out Boyd felt a return of that misgiving which had mastered him on his first meeting with Mildred in Chicago. For the second time he was bringing her failure instead of the promised victory.
